New Instructors Hired By Board—Fall Term Will Open Monday.

The Board of Education of Saltcreek-twp met Monday evening and completed arrangements for the opening of school Monday, Sept. 2, at 9:00 o'clock. The Monday session will be not more than two hours long. The trucks will return with the pupils to their homes before noon.

The board unanimously passed a resolution instructing the superintendent not to let any books go out except as they are settled for by cash or settlement provided for at a definite date. The following teachers are in charge of the work: Wertie C. Dyer, A. B. A. M., superintendent; Ralph Lane, A. B., principal high school; Ethel Mae Lett, B. S. C., assistant principal; Dorothy Buckley, A. B. B. S. C. music; Helen Bowers, A. NEW TEACHERS ABLE

The teachers remaining from last year need no introduction. The newly elected teachers are abundantly prepared for their work. Mr. Lane of Ashville, who was honor student in high school and Capitol college, has a wide range of subject matter and a special training in English that few college students have.

Miss Ethel Lett, of Cincinnati, for Home Economics and allied subjects has the scientific as well as the artistic side of her work well in hand. She has the strong endorsement of the Home Economics department of Miami university where she graduated.

The board wishes to remind parents that home economics is one of the biggest and most valuable fields in education, not excepting any. Cooking and sewing are only a small part. Home plans, heating, ventilation, water system sanitation, conveniences, care, preservation and preparation of food, food selection, dietetics in general, bacteriology, knowledge of contagious diseases and their prevention, care of the sick, first aid, care of children, textiles, sewing and care of clothing, sewing home decoration, table service including arrangement, setting table, etiquette or manners, use and care of silver, social service including making of guest and hostess calls, dining of guest and hostess, financial and social possibilities of domestic service, are all included.

D. W. McGrath and Sons, contractors of Columbus, have the contract and hope to have the building completed by Christmas.

The brick work will be started Monday and approximately 150,000 colored brick will be used in the structure. The supervisor also stated that approximately 7500 sacks of cement were used in the construction of the foundation.

At the present time about 20 men are employed by the contractors, the majority of whom are local residents. These workmen, when leaving for home in the evening, have completed nine hours of hard labor, as they report at 7 o'clock in the morning and check out at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Residents of Circleville who wish to view the work now being carried on at the site are cordially invited to inspect it.

MISS BOWERS ON STAFF

The seventh and eighth grades are in charge of Miss Helen Bowers of Ashville. Miss Bowers was valedictorian of her class at Walnut-twp and has graduated from Capitol college. She is amply prepared for junior high school work which corresponds to seventh and eighth and freshman high school.

Saltcreek is fortunate in securing the service of these teachers who are thoroughly trained for their work. The board has done much repair work on the buildings and grounds putting the school plant in excellent condition. The board merits the support and commendation of all for their diligence in providing ample school facilities. The teachers will do their full share while parents and patrons now have a renewed opportunity to accomplish the most for the training of the children which is the purpose of all the time, effort and expense.

GOLF TOURNAMENT LABOR DAY

A handicap golf tournament will be played Labor Day at the Pickaway Country club. The Circleville Herald silver loving cup will be presented to the winner. This trophy is on display in the window of the T. K. Brunner and Son jewelry store on W. Main-st.

Only Class A members of the country club may qualify for this tournament, in which other prizes will probably be awarded. The tournament will be the last of the season.

Next year a number of matches are being planned for both the men and women members. By that time handicaps can more accurately be estimated and more members will feel that their game warrants entering matches.

GRAF TO SOAR OVER CHICAGO BEFORE DARK

Dirigible Speeds After Leaving Texas—Passenger Has Heart Attack.

VIBBART, Mo., Aug. 28.—The mighty air liner, Graf Zeppelin, passed over here at 10:23 o'clock (12:23 E. D. T.) today. It was flying high and at a rapid rate of speed.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 28.—Traveling at a fast rate of speed, the Graf Zeppelin passed over Kansas City at 9:40 a. m. (11:40 Eastern daylight time) today.

After circling the city twice while a score of airplanes escorted it, the Graf pointed its nose northeast and departed at 9:50 a. m. It was expected that Dr. Hugo Eckener would fly direct to Chicago from here. From Chicago it will probably fly to Cleveland, O., by way of Toledo.

A tight tail wind favored the huge air liner, which was estimated to be making better than 80 miles an hour.

Thousands of persons saw the Graf from building tops and high hills. Although the sky was hazy, the Graf dropped to an altitude of 1000 feet while circling the city.

SPEED PICKS UP
ON BOARD GRAF, ZEPPELIN, Aug. 28.—Although impeded by strong headwinds ever since leaving Los Angeles yesterday, the Graf Zeppelin on the final lap of its round-the-world journey has had no trouble in making better speed than the swiftest express train.

As this dispatch was filed, the Zeppelin was heading Kansas City. Dr. Eckener, commander of the Graf, estimates an eight hour run from there to Chicago, which should bring the Graf over the lake city about 5 p. m. Central Standard time. Night will see its passage over Ohio.

The Zeppelin had smooth sailing all last night, the captain of darkness apparently having freed the bumps out of the air. But Zeppelin still lacks some of the conveniences of home. The male passengers on this trip are becoming adepts in the fine art of bathing, shaving and washing in a single tumbler full of water.

PASSENGER IS ILL.
It was learned that the Graf Zeppelin now carries an invalid, reported to be in a precarious state of health. Baron Hynus Von Perckhammer, a journalist employed by a large German newspaper organization and one of the passengers on the round the world flight, had been stricken with a heart attack shortly after the Graf passed over El Paso last evening.

Dr. Alfonse Megias, physician to the King of Spain, also a passenger on the flight, administered aid to the stricken man. He was given temporary treatment while the dirigible soared half a mile above the Texas expanses, and informed by Dr. Megias that he must remain in bed and utterly inactive for a considerable period in order that his recovery might be made certain.

PLANES WILL THRILL FAIR

Naval Aircraft Will Give Demonstration At Columbus On Thursday.

OHIO STATE FAIR GROUNDS, Columbus, O., Aug. 28.—Visitors to this conglomerate $100,000,000 "show" will turn air-minded tomorrow when a fleet of navy airplanes will swoop down upon the race track here.

The planes, a contingent from the National Air races at Cleveland, will be in command of David S. Ingalls, Cleveland, assistant secretary of the Navy and Ohio's former flying solon.

Meanwhile, the crowds have not given up the hope of seeing the Graf Zeppelin, the mightiest ship of the skies, nose its way over this 115-acre plot of exhibitions tonight.

According to International News Service dispatches from the west, the route of the Graf has remained undetermined and officials are hoping that Dr. Hugo Eckener will give the crowds a glimpse of his round-the-world craft.

Attendance at the Buckeye state's "madri gras" yesterday reached the peak of more than 66,000 persons, and as the crowds became heavier throughout the closing days of the week, Perry L. Green, state agriculture director, said he still had confidence that the 500,000 goal will be reached.

ONIONS TO DELAY SCHOOL OPENING

KENTON, O., Aug. 28.—Schools at the village of Alger, near here, will not open until September 16, it was decided today, in order to allow the pupils to aid in the harvesting of the bumper 1929 onion crop.

This delay of two weeks was thought necessary by the school board in view of the feverish activity on the famous Hardin-onion marshes.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—The great mail planes, thundering out of the murky twilight to land upon the tarmac of the Municipal Airport or droning away to meet the dawn on the west coast run, carried over 191,000 pounds of Uncle Sam's mail last month to all parts of the country.

The casual observer at the airport sees only scurrying groups of men cramming half a ton of mail into the maw of a plane waiting in the glare of a searchlight. The crowd sees only the slim, cool-eyed pilot whose hands lift the plane roaring into the night; they never see "the men behind the plane."

In the large hangar that houses the repair and maintenance departments are completely equipped machine and carpentry shops and laboratories sufficient to manufacture a mail plane complete from tail-skid to "prop."

A large proportion of the 125 workmen employed by the repair department are from the famous Luft-Hansa Aircraft Works in Germany. Each man is a specialist.

Government statistics show that five skilled workmen are required to keep a single plane groomed and in flight, while two highly trained men are required to instruct a mail pilot in his job. Observation and weather stations and corps of expert engineers also are employed to keep the mail in the air.

"We cannot trust to luck in the air mail game," said C. C. Hamilton. "Our planes fly 365 days of the year in all manner of weather. The best of pilots are required, men who have flown in every conceivable kind of weather. Our present safety rating is 99 per cent perfect."

The field and possibilities are almost unlimited in the hands of a good teacher with reasonable facilities.

The music is in charge of Miss Dorothy Buckley, of Marion. Miss Buckley has graduated from both Ohio Wesleyan and Ohio State and during that time had a year of experience in teaching music. More than five years of college has given Miss Buckley a wide training in other subjects than music.

MISS BOWERS ON STAFF
The seventh and eighth grades are in charge of Miss Helen Bowers of Ashville. Miss Bowers was valedictorian of her class at Walnut-tw and has graduated from Capitol college. She is amply prepared for junior high school work which corresponds to seventh and eighth and freshman high school.

Saltcreek is fortunate in securing the service of these teachers who are thoroughly trained for their work. The board has done much repair work on the buildings and grounds putting the school plant in excellent condition. The board merits the support and commendation of all for their diligence in providing ample school facilities. The teachers will do their full share while parents and patrons now have a renewed opportunity to accomplish the most for the training of the children which is the purpose of all the time, effort and expense.

GOLF TOURNEY LABOR DAY

Players Invited To Compete
For Cup Offered by The Herald.

A handicap golf tourney will be played Labor Day at the Pickaway Country club. The Circleville Herald silver loving cup will be presented to the winner. This trophy is on display in the window of the T. K. Brunner and Son jewelry store on W. Main-st.

Only Class A members of the country club may qualify for this tournament, in which other prizes will probably be awarded. The tournament will be the last of the season.

Next year a number of matches are being planned for both the men and women members. By that time handicaps can more accurately be estimated, and more members will feel that their game warrants entering matches.

Mrs. Rancy Moss and son, Paul, are visiting this week with her mother, Mrs. Margaret Hoover of Ashville.

CONSTRUCTION PROGRESSING

Brick Work on Circleville Hospital Will Be Started Next Week.

Construction of Circleville's new hospital is rapidly progressing as the foundation is complete and the laying of the floor will probably start next week, according to the supervisor, N. J. Altman. D. W. McGrath and Sons, contractors of Columbus, have the contract and hope to have the building completed by Christmas.

The brick work will be started Monday and approximately 150,000 colored brick will be used in the structure. The supervisor also stated that approximately 7500 sacks of cement were used in the construction of the foundation.

At the present time about 20 men are employed by the contractors, the majority of whom are local residents. These workmen, when leaving for home in the evening, have completed nine hours of hard labor, as they report at 7 o'clock in the morning and check out at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Residents of Circleville who wish to view the work now being carried on at the site are cordially invited to inspect it.

FINGERPRINTS IS CLUB TOPIC

Sheriff Davis Shows Kiwanis How Telltale Clues Are Obtained.

Sheriff Frank Davis and Deputy Miller Fissell had charge of the feature of the program at this week's Kiwanis meeting, which followed the regular supper served at Hanley's tea room. This program consisted of demonstrations by Davis and Fissell of the methods by which finger prints of criminals are obtained. The results and explanations were most interesting to the club members.

The regular business of the organization was in charge of the assistant Tom Renick. It was decided that since next Monday is Labor Day, that the meeting of the club would be postponed until the following week. At that time, Monday, September 9, the Kiwanis will go to Williamsport for a chicken supper. Wives of the members will be guests at the supper which will be served at 7 o'clock in the parish house.

LADDER, SCAFFOLD BREAK; 2 INJURED

KENTON, O., Aug. 28.—Thomas Hattery is today recalling his double escape from death yesterday afternoon and a co-worker, Oscar Long, is also thanking his "lucky stars."

Hattery was working on a grain elevator when the ladder which was supporting him broke. He jumped to a nearby scaffold where Long was working. The scaffolding gave way under the impact of Hattery and both he and Long were hurled 25 feet to the ground.

Neither was seriously injured.

NABBED BY SHERIFF

William Cryder, Circleville, was arrested Tuesday by Sheriff Frank Davis for authorities at Lancaster, where he is wanted on a charge of non-support.

GRAF TO SOAR OVER CHICAGO BEFORE DARK

Dirigible Speeds After Leaving Texas—Passenger Has Heart Attack.

VIBBART, Mo., Aug. 28.—The mighty air liner, Graf Zeppelin, passed over here at 10:23 o'clock (12:23 E. D. T.) today. It was flying high and at a rapid rate of speed.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 28.—Traveling at a fast rate of speed, the Graf Zeppelin passed over Kansas City at 9:40 a. m. (11:40 Eastern daylight time) today.

After circling the city twice while a score of airplanes escorted it, the Graf pointed its nose northeast and departed at 9:50 a. m. it was expected that Dr. Hugo Eckener would fly direct to Chicago from here. From Chicago it will probably fly to Cleveland, O., by way of Toledo.

A tight tail wind favored the huge air liner, which was estimated to be making better than 80 miles an hour.

Thousands of persons saw the Graf from building tops and high hills. Although the sky was hazy, the Graf dropped to an altitude of 1000 feet while circling the city.

SPEED PICKS UP
ON BOARD GRAF, ZEPPELIN, Aug. 28.—Although impeded by strong headwinds ever since leaving Los Angeles yesterday, the Graf Zeppelin on the final lap of its round-the-world journey has had no trouble in making better speed than the swiftest express train.

As this dispatch was filed the Zeppelin was nearing Kansas City. Dr. Eckener, commander of the Graf, estimates an eight hour run from there to Chicago, which should bring the Graf over the lake city about 5 p. m. Central Standard time. Night will see its passage over Ohio.

The Zeppelin had smooth sailing all last night, the curtain of darkness apparently having ironed the bumps out of the air. But Zeppelin travel over the United States still lacks some of the conveniences of home. The male passengers on this trip are becoming adepts in the fine art of bathing, shaving and washing in a single tumbler full of water.

PASSENGER IS ILL
It was learned that the Graf Zeppelin now carries an invalid, reported to be in a precarious state of health. Baron Heinz Von Perckhammer, a journalist employed by a large German newspaper organization and one of the passengers on the round the world flight, had been stricken with a heart attack shortly after the Graf passed over El Paso last evening.

Dr. Alfonso Megias, personal physician to the King of Spain and also a passenger on the flight, administered aid to the stricken man. He was given temporary treatment while the dirigible soared half a mile above the Texan expanse, and informed by Dr. Megias that he must remain in bed and utterly inactive for a considerable period in order that his recovery might be made certain.

'SHUTTLE' ROARING TOWARD NEW MARK

OMAHA, NEB. Aug. 28.—(INS)—After obtaining 2000 gallons of gasoline, oil and provisions, the plane, "Shuttle" piloted by Ira Eaker, roared into the east towards Cleveland today.

The plane expects to shuttle between Oakland and New York until the motor is shattered.

Pilot Eaker, according to his schedule, was a few hours behind time. The motor appeared to be functioning perfectly.

ENDURANCE PLANE ALOFT 117 HOURS

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—(INS)—With the motor of their Stinson-Detroit monoplane droning away steadily, Russell Moorman and C. E. Steele, Chicago's endurance flyers, were still aloft over Sky Harbor airport today. At 8:31 A. M. (Chicago Daylight Saving time) today the flyers had been aloft for 117 hours.

GOOD GRIDIRON SEASON AHEAD, GUTHRIE SAYS

Plenty of Candidates For C. H. S. Eleven—Practice Will Start Soon.

(By Pat Kirwin)

As soon as school starts, sometime else will start, and this is football. According to J. M. Guthrie, athletic instructor at Circleville high school, he will expect and will probably win many victories, as he has some very good material. The boys will go through some hard work-outs at the beginning of the season, and as soon as they are in good shape, the real practice will begin. About 40 or 50 men are expected to report to the field when the season begins. So far about 35 men have reported for practice.

Many of the freshmen and eight graders reported and will get in shape for future playing. The football schedule has not been completed and will not be disclosed until a later date. According to

CIRCLEVILLE MAN SURPRISED AT RESULTS OF SPINAGO

Glorious Health In Store For Everyone If They Follow the Advice of James Eggers.

"After taking two bottles of Spinago, I was surely surprised at the wonderful results obtained." So spoke Mr. James Eggers who is employed by Sturm & Dillard and resides in Circleville at 227 E. Mount St., when he came into the Mykranitz Pharmacy, the other day.

Mr. Eggers is not alone in his praise for this master medicine. Every day many residents of Circleville and neighboring towns call at the Spinago store—the Mykranitz Pharmacy, 107 N. Court St. to tell of new wonders worked and lost health regained by its use. Mr. Eggers went on to say:

JAMES EGGERS.

"For many years I suffered untold misery arising from stomach trouble and constipation. Bloating and gas after every meal made eating very unpleasant. Terrible pains centered in the pit of my stomach. Faulty elimination of waste materials from my body caused me to lose all my pep and energy. You can imagine how little enjoyment I got out of life. One by one other remedies were tried but with no relief. Then came the happy day when Mr. James Marshall told me of the benefits his wife had derived from Spinago. Although a little skeptical, I tried it and surely was surprised at the results obtained. No more stomach trouble now, no more gas and bloating. I have a wonderful appetite can eat anything without fear and I enjoy my meals. My bowels have been perfectly regulated and my system is kept thoroughly cleansed. My old time pep and energy have returned and I now enjoy life to the utmost. It is wonderful to think that such a tonic as Spinago is available to all who suffer from my former ailments and I am sure that if others will take my advice the same glorious health and happiness is in store for them."

And Spinago can accomplish such feats as the above simply because it is a practical tonic. Because it is concentrated Spinach, the medicinal value of which is known by everyone, it contains an assortment of well known roots, herbs and barks. Its composition is the reason why the most stubborn and chronic cases of indigestion, constipation, rheumatism, neuritis, loss of weight or energy, liver and kidney complaints and kindred ailments cannot stand up against the powerful action of Spinago.

It is not wise to profit from the experience of others. Follow the example of the Mykranitz Pharmacy, 107 N. Court St. Circleville, and try a bottle of Spinago on an absolute money back guarantee—adv.

the coach there will be no games played during Pumpkin Show week and Nov. 28th is open. The first game of the season will probably be played in early October, and the opposing team will probably be Walnut-twp.

Football fans will probably see quite a few new players and will be surprised at their art of playing. Football season will start immediately after school starts and will continue until the latter part of November.

Coach Guthrie has selected the following men for a chance on one of the possible 11 positions: For the back field these men have a chance: Loring Davis, George Iles, Robert Hundley, Gaines Hill, John Heskell, Joseph Lowery, Don White, Don Wilson, Ned Dresbach and Marvin Dresbach. The try-outs for center are: Wilbur Adkins, William Hegele and Medford Good. The guards will be selected from Harry Sabine, Joel Russell, Bob Rector, Frank Dunlap, John Lewis, Paul Wallace and Herbert Thomas.

Malcolm Russell, Leon Gordon, Marshall McColister, Jack Chaffin and Albert Hoffman will tryout for the tackle. The end men who will practice to the best of their ability and will prove to the coach that they should be there are: Stanley Greene, Robert Adkins, Paul Woodward, Lawrence Styres and Elwood Lewis.

Stonehenge Mystery to Students of the Past

Ancient and mysterious Stonehenge is located some nine miles from Salisbury, and near the little town of Amesbury, in Wiltshire, England. This circular formation of stones encloses what is commonly called the Altar stone. What its origin or purpose is, however, is not known, but it is obvious that it is connected with some form of observation of the sun, possibly sun worship. It is generally believed to have been erected some 4,000 years ago, possibly by the tribe from the Continent which brought the idea of cultivation of land to England in the Bronze age. To the east of the Stone circle is the Hele stone or Friar's heel, over which at dawn on June 21—namely, at the summer solstice—the sun rises when viewed from the Altar stone. Other pointed stones mark the rise of the sun at the winter solstice and sunset at midsummer. At four places in England can the thoughts run riot to an extent as to this circle of immense stones standing in solitude overlooking Salisbury plain. Pictures of human sacrifice and heathen rites spring readily to the imagination.

Columbus' Coat of Arms

It was in "the glorious times of good Queen Bess" when the Spaniard was Lord of the Empire. Al. knew the story of his "Invincible Armada"; but it had an unforeseen result through one of the vessels being wrecked on the Fair Isle, off the coast of Scotland, and some 20 of the crew being saved. During a stay of some months there, the Spaniards taught the women then quaint patterns. One of the patterns is a golden anchor on a blue ground. This was the coat of arms granted to Columbus by the Spaniards, as one of the rewards of his discovery of the New world.—Montreal Family Herald.

FINAL BOUTS ON THURSDAY

Last of Summer Battles To Be Staged At Scippo Park This Week.

Thursday night at Scippo Park fight fans will witness as the last bouts of the season some hard scrapping.

Four bouts are scheduled and real ones they surely will be for in the first bout of the evening Kid Beck, of Circleville, will oppose Mickey Brannan also of Circleville. This will be a great eye opener for these boys met last week and the result was that Beck gave Brannan a beating and Brannan is on the warpath for Beck's scalp Thursday evening.

In another bout Kid Cupp of Circleville, will meet Joe Gans Jr. They also fought last week with Cupp annexing the victory to his growing list. But Gans is in better form this week and is going to try and flatten the local boy. Cupp doesn't think so because he says that it just can't be done.

The semi-final of the evening will be a four round bout between Johnny Kain, of Williamsport, and Watson Brown, of Circleville. Kain is coming over to show Brown that his town is on the map and he says that he can prove it by giving Brown a real drubbing. But Brown doesn't think so and in that event there will certainly be an honest-to-goodness battle.

In the main-go the Alabama Kid of Columbus, will meet Kid Brown of Chillicothe. Both of these boys are good fighters and promise some real action. Both have made up their minds that one of them must drop.

Scientists Listen to "Conversation" of Ants

Two scientists of the University of Pittsburgh recently perfected an apparatus for detecting the sounds of underground communication among ants.

A block of wood was placed upon the diaphragm of an ordinary telephone transmitter, which in turn was connected through batteries and amplifiers to a pair of ear phones. When the termites crawled over the block of wood the transmitter was agitated, resulting in sound vibrations which were clearly heard by the listeners at the headset.

When the ants became excited over something or other their soldiers were found to hammer their heads vigorously on the wood. This action could be clearly seen and heard at the same time.

The investigators found that the ants could hear sound vibrations in the air very poorly or not at all, but were extremely sensitive to vibrations in the ground. For this reason it was thought that the head hammering was a method of communication.

Because of this sensitivity to sub-stratum vibrations ants are seldom found to infest the ties of railroads carrying heavy traffic, or buildings containing machinery. The vibrations meant danger to them just as if one of their own number was giving the alarm by banging his head on the ground.

Sauerkraut Traced to Asiatic Wild Tribes

Sauerkraut, once an alien in this country, has been completely naturalized and adopted by the nation as evidenced by the fact that the figures show that during the last year this nation made and consumed 10,000,000 gallons of sauerkraut. This represents a valuation of $2,500,000. It is no longer looked upon as a dietary of a foreign land. While the Germans are given the credit of originating sauerkraut, the charge is not well founded. There is evidence that it has been made in Holland and in Alsace from early times. One writer traces it to Asia, showing how the Tartars first passed on a sauerkraut recipe to the Slavic peoples of eastern Europe, who in their turn gave it to the ancient Germans. From Germany, it is conceded, the delicacy was brought here by immigrants, who as they increased in number, spread its popularity as a food.

GOOD FINISH MEANS A GOOD SHOT

THE finish of the swing means more than the average golfer will admit. Few shots go wrong where the finish has been perfect, or even fairly good. Tommy Armour looked at a photograph of himself recently taken at the completion of his swing and remarked that it must have been a very good shot.

If the club goes the route from the top of the swing to a position revolve around the sun is 365,242 days. The annual error is therefore only .00026 of a day, which means that it will take 3864 years for the error to amount to one day. This is a very great improvement over the Old Style or Julian calendar, which was abandoned by Great Britain and her American colonies in 1752.

Calendar Almost Perfect

The present calendar, which is called the Gregorian or New Style calendar, is probably as nearly correct as it is possible for a calendar to be without becoming too complicated. The average year in the Gregorian is 365.2425 days long, while the mean solar year or the exact time it takes the earth to revolve around the sun is 365.2422 days. The annual error is therefore only .00026 of a day, which means that it will take 3864 years for the error to amount to one day. This is a very great improvement over the Old Style or Julian calendar, which was abandoned by Great Britain and her American colonies in 1752.

DEBATE ENDS HECTIC GAME

Ward's Ten and C. A. C. In Deadlock—Transports Defeat Colas.

The old bull game went up in smoke after a hot argument in the eighth inning of a hectic recreation contest at Mason's field. Tuesday night when Ward's Ten and the C. A. C. failed to agree on whether Radcliff, Ward's center fielder, was out or in.

In the preceding innings, Ward's Ten had made 18 hits for 13 runs and the C. A. C. had connected safely 14 times for 14 runs. Ward's outfit was at bat in the last of the eighth, two men out, two on and Radcliff, a heavy hitter, who had obtained a triple, double, and single in three previous trips to the plate, at bat.

It is claimed that Pickens, fearing the worst if he pitched to Radcliff, stepped out of his box to toss the ball to the plate, an act which called for the walking of Radcliff. The batsman, however, is said to have stepped across the plate to swing at Pickens' wild throw, an act which put him out. Argument failed to produce an agreement on the difficulty and it was agreed to call the game off and replay it another night this week.

While fireworks were featured at Mason's Park, at the Utilities field the Motor Transport team was putting the works on the Co-Cola. The soft drinks were capped with a defeat by the score of 4 to 2.

GOOD GRIDIRON SEASON AHEAD, GUTHRIE SAYS

Plenty of Candidates For C. H. S. Eleven—Practice Will Start Soon.

(By Pat Kirwin)

As soon as school starts, sometime will start, and this is football. According to J. M. Guthrie, athletic instructor at Circleville high school, he will expect and will probably win many victories, as he has some very good material. The boys will go through some hard work-outs at the beginning of the season, and as soon as they are in good shape, the real practice will begin. About 40 or 50 men are expected to report to the field when the season begins. So far about 35 men have reported for practice.

Many of the freshmen and eight graders reported and will get in shape for future playing. The football schedule has not been completed and will not be disclosed until a later date. According to the coach there will be no games played during Pumpkin Show week and Nov. 28th is open. The first game of the season will probably be played in early October, and the opposing team will probably be Walnut-twp.

Football fans will probably see quite a few new players and will be surprised as to their art of playing. Football season will start immediately after school starts and will continue until the latter part of November.

Coach Guthrie has selected the following men for a chance on one of the possible 11 positions. For the back field these men have a chance; Loring Davis, George Iles, Robert Hundley, Gaines Hill, John Heiskell, Joseph Lowery, Don White, Don Wilson, Ned Dresbach and Marvin Dresbach. The try-outs for center are: Wilbur Adkins, William Hegele and Medford Good. The guards will be selected from Harry Sabine, Joel Russell, Bob Rector, Frank Dunlap, John Lewis, Paul Wallace and Herbert Thomas.

Malcolm Russell, Leon Gordon, Marshall McCollister, Jack Charlin and Albert Hoffman will tryout for the tackle. The end men who will practice to the best of their ability and will prove to the coach that they should be there are: Stanley Greene, Robert Adkins, Paul Woodward, Lawrence Styres and Elwood Lewis.

Stonehenge Mystery to Students of the Past

Ancient and mysterious Stonehenge is located some nine miles from Salisbury, and near the little town of Amesbury, in Wiltshire, England. This circular formation of stones encloses what is commonly called the Altar stone. What its origin or purpose is, no one has been able to reveal, but it is obviously connected with some form of worship. It is generally believed to have been erected some 4,000 years ago, possibly by the tribe from the Continent which brought the idea of cultivation of land to England in the Bronze age. To the east of the Stone circle is the Hele stone or Friar's heel, over which at dawn on June 21—namely, at the summer solstice—the sun rises when viewed from the Altar stone. Other pointed stones mark the rise of the sun at the winter solstice and sunset at midsummer. At few places in England can the thoughts run riot to such an extent as in this circle of immense stones standing in solitude overlooking Salisbury plain. Pictures of human sacrifice and heathen rites spring readily to the imagination.

Columbus' Coat of Arms

It was in "the spacious times of good Queen Bess" when the Spaniard was Lord of the Earth. He knew the story of his "Invincible Armada"; but it had an unforeseen result through one of the vessels wrecked on the Fair Isle, off the coast of Scotland, and some 200 of the crew at the winter solstice a stay of some months there, the Spaniards taught the women their quaint patterns. One of the patterns is a golden anchor on a blue ground. This was the coat of arms granted to Columbus by the Spanish sovereigns as one of the rewards of his discovery of the New world.—Montreal Family Herald.

FINAL BOUTS ON THURSDAY

Last of Summer Battles To Be Staged At Scippo Park This Week.

Thursday night at Scippo Park fight fans will witness as the last bouts of the season some hard scrapping.

Four bouts are scheduled and real ones they surely will be for in the first bout of the evening Kid Beck, of Circleville, will oppose Mickey Brannan also of Circleville. This will be a great eye opener for these boys met last week and the result was that Beck gave Brannan a beating and Brannan is on the warpath for Beck's scalp Thursday evening.

In another bout Kid Cupp of Circleville, will meet Joe Gans Jr. They also fought last week with Cupp annexing the victory to his growing list. But Gans is in better form this week and is going to try and flatten the local boy. Cupp doesn't think so because he says that it just can't be done.

The semi-final of the evening will be a four round bout between Johnny Kain, of Williamsport, and Watson Brown, of Circleville. Kain is coming over to show Brown that his town is on the map and he says that he can prove it by giving Brown a real drubbing. But Brown doesn't think so and in that event there will certainly be an honest-to-goodness battle.

In the main-gate the Alabama Kid of Columbus, will meet Kid Brown of Chillicothe. Both of these boys are good fighters and promise some real action. Both have made up their minds that one of them must drop.

Scientists Listen to

"Conversation" of Ants

Two scientists of the University of Pittsburgh recently perfected an apparatus for detecting the sounds of underground communication among ants.

A block of wood was placed upon the diaphragm of an ordinary telephone transmitter, which in turn was connected through batteries and amplifiers to a pair of earphones. When the termites crawled over the block of wood the transmitter was agitated, resulting in sound vibrations which were clearly heard by the listeners at the headset.

When the ants became excited over something or other their soldiers were found to hammer their heads vigorously on the wood. This action could be clearly seen and heard at the same time.

The investigators found that the ants could hear sound vibrations in the air very poorly or not at all, but were extremely sensitive to vibrations underground. For this reason it was thought that the head hammering was a method of communication.

Because of this sensitivity to sub-stratum vibrations ants are seldom found to infest the ties of railroads carrying heavy traffic, or buildings containing machinery. The vibrations meant danger to them just as if one of their own number was giving the alarm by banging his head on the ground.

Sauerkraut Traced to Asiatic Wild Tribes

Sauerkraut, once an alien in this country, has been completely naturalized and adopted by the nation as evidenced by the fact that the figures show that during the last year this nation made and consumed 14,000,000 gallons of sauerkraut. This represents a valuation of $3,500,000. It is no longer looked upon as a dietary of a foreign land. While the Germans are given the credit of originating sauerkraut, the charge is not well founded. There is evidence that it has been made in Holland and in Alsace from early times. One writer traces it to Asia, showing how the Tartars first passed on a sauerkraut recipe to the Slavic peoples of eastern Europe, who in their turn gave it to the ancient Germans. From Germany, it is conceded, the delicacy was brought here by immigrants, who as they increased in numbers spread its popularity as a food.

Pictorial Golf Instruction

By H. B. MARTIN

GOOD FINISH MEANS A GOOD SHOT

THE finish of the swing means more than the average golfer will admit. Few shots go wrong where the finish has been perfect, or even fairly good. Tommy Armour looked at a photograph of himself recently taken at the completion of his swing and remarked that it must have been a very good shot.

If the club goes the route from the top of the swing to a position around behind the back working its way in a groove as it were, the ball will be hit properly 19 out of 20 times. Harry Vardon has the perfect swing of golf and he misses a smaller percentage of his drives than any other player. (© 1929, Bell Syndicate.)

Calendar Almost Perfect

The present calendar, which is called the Gregorian or New Style calendar, is probably as nearly correct as it is possible for a calendar to be without becoming too complicated. The average year in the Gregorian is 365.2425 days long, while the mean solar year or the exact time it takes the earth to revolve around the sun is 365.2422 days. The annual error is therefore only .0003 of a day, which means that it will take 3864 years for the error to amount to one day. This is a very great improvement over the Old Style or Julian calendar, which was abandoned by Great Britain and her American colonies in 1752.

DEBATE ENDS HECTIC GAME

Ward's Ten and C. A. C. In Deadlock—Transports Defeat Colas.

The old ball game went up in smoke after a hot argument in the eighth inning of a hectic recreation contest at Mason's field. Tuesday night when Ward's Ten and the C. A. C. failed to agree on whether Radcliff, Ward's center fielder, was out or in.

In the preceding innings, Ward's Ten had made 18 hits for 13 runs and the C. A. C. had connected safely 14 times for 14 runs. Ward's outfit was at bat in the last of the eighth, two men out, two on and Radcliff, a heavy hitter, who had obtained a triple, double, and single in three previous trips to the plate, at bat.

It is claimed that Picken, fearing the worst if he pitched to Radcliff, stepped out of his box to toss the ball to the plate, an act which called for the walking of Radcliff. The batsman, however, is said to have stepped across the plate to swing at Picken's wild throw, an act which put him out.

Argument failed to produce an agreement on the difficulty and it was agreed to call the game off and replay it another night this week.

While fireworks were featured at Mason's Park, at the Utilities field the Motor Transport team was putting the works on the Co-co Colas. The soft drinks were capped with a defeat by the score of 4 to 2.

THEATRES

BUSTER BATTLE BOOZE

Buster Keaton battles with rum runners, navigates a burning and deserted ship through a storm, wrecks a theater and a night club, and indulges in other strenuous and hilarious adventures in his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy, "Spite Marriage," playing at the Cliftona Theater, with synchronized score and sound effects.

It's the story of a tailor who poses as a millionaire in the plumage of his customers, marries a beautiful actress and then is utterly submerged in comical griefs, woes, mishaps and adventures. Most of the big laughs come through Buster's participation in such thrills as a battle at sea, swinging head downward from the mast of a ship in a storm and such details.

But through the comedy runs something unusual in Keaton pictures in the way of a very poignant little heart interest story, and sometimes even while laughing at Buster one feels a very powerful sympathy for him and his love.

SECRETS OF SUB WAR

How German U-boats sank innumerable allied ships during the World War is thrillingly presented in "Behind the German Lines," official pictures taken by the German government, now showing at the Met Theater. The pictures have been synchronized with Paramount Quality Sound giving additional thrills by virtue of the musical score and sound effects.

Because of the English blockade Germany's only recourse was to follow out its drastic submarine campaign, according to the screen titles which were taken from the German files. This she did with unrestrained activity, finally causing America to enter the conflict. The films show the sinking of the three masted sailing vessel Era by the submarine U-35. Torpedoes were not used in sinking it, as well placed bombs did the work. The Era's plunge to the bottom is graphically shown, with another steamer also sent to the bottom by a tremendous explosion.

THEATRES

BUSTER BATTLE BOOZE

Buster Keaton battles with rum runners, navigates a burning and deserted ship through a storm, wrecks a theater and a night club, and indulges in other strenuous and hilarious adventures in his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy, "Spite Marriage," playing at the Cliftona Theater, with synchronized score and sound effects.

Its the story of a tailor who poses as a millionaire in the plumage of his customers, marries a beautiful actress and then is utterly submerged in comical griefs, woes, mishaps and adventures. Most of the big laughs come through Buster's participation in such thrills as a battle at sea, swinging head downward from the mast of a ship in a storm and such details.

But through the comedy runs something unusual in Keaton pictures in the way of a very poignant little heart interest story, and sometimes even while laughing at Buster one feels a very powerful sympathy for him and his love.

SECRETS OF SUB WAR

How German U-boats sank innumerable allied ships during the World War is thrillingly presented in "Behind the German Lines," official pictures taken by the German government, now showing at the Met Theater. The pictures have been synchronized with Paramount Quality Sound giving additional thrills by virtue of the musical score and sound effects.

Because of the English blockade German's only recourse was to follow out its drastic submarine campaign, according to the screen titles which were taken from the German files. This she did with unrestrained activity, finally causing America to enter the conflict. The films show the sinking of the three masted sailing vessel Era by the submarine U-35. Torpedoes were not used in sinking it, as well placed bombs did the work. The Era's plunge to the bottom is graphically shown, with another steamer also sent to the bottom by a tremendous explosion.

Will Try Again

Semyon Shestakof, Russian pilot of the ill-fated Soviet plane which attempted an unsuccessful flight to America, will shortly take off again in a second attempt to cross the Atlantic.

"SCANDAL" IS TALKIE

Laura La Plante, John Boles and Huntley Gordon are starred at the Grand Theater Wednesday and Thursday in a drama entitled "Scandal."

Haunted by a past that would not die! Plunged into the mad whirl of society's fastest set, she battled for the right to happiness with woman's oldest weapon. But the poison-drooling tongue of Scandal licked at her life. Was a lifetime of Truth as nothing against one minute of Lies? See this absorbing drama of a beautiful girl who fought society's snares only to become the central figure in a murder mystery which set all society aghast at its scandal—and its daring.

A Vitaphone act and a Movietone act are also on the bill.

Mark Twain's View

"When I recollect the treasure of friendship that has been bestowed upon me, I withdraw all charges against life," said Mark Twain, according to the American Magazine.

Didn't Apply to Him

"It's the time for good boys to be in bed," said mother to Billy. "But mother," said the child, "don't you remember that I wasn't good today?"—Children.

Reeds for Willowware

GANGLAND'S BEST BRAINS BEING DEFIED IN GOTHAM
U. S. Builds Huge Vault In New York for Storage of Dangerous Drugs.
New York—Meeting the challenge of the New York underworld, the United States is constructing the largest vault ever built anywhere for the storage of dangerous drugs.
The vault is nearing completion on the seventh floor of building A at the army base in South Brooklyn. When its massive steel doors, more formidable than those used in bank vaults, arrive from a Pennsylvania factory, the vault will be ready to protect additional millions of dollars' worth of cocaine, heroin, opium and morphine.
Ever a well-informed gangster in the metropolis knows about the new vault. For organized crime in New York for the past three years has been making persistent and almost incredibly daring attempts to outwit the army guardians of the base.
Gangland knows what the public does not suspect—that is, the army is storing in Brooklyn not only the largest drug supply ever collected under one roof, but the largest amount of pure liquor in any one place in the country.
The underworld always has a market for good whiskey and rare wines, for they can be diluted a great deal. And it needs dope to nerve its denizens on to holdups and assaults of the more vicious sort.
Uncle Sam, on the other hand, is hoarding the narcotics for hospital use in the next war and is taking new precautions every month to trap his criminal opponents.
The scene of the struggle is 100 acres of waterfront property between Fifth and Sixth streets. Ten-foot high wire surrounds three sides of the army base and water the fourth. Armed guards pace up and down at the entrance to protect this principal peace time supply place of the whole army, where everything from locomotives to flannel shirts, is stored.
The United States ran short of drugs in the last war, as did other nations. Next time it intends to be prepared. Drugs do not deteriorate. When seized throughout the country, frequently they are shipped by court authorities to the two vaults already in use on the sixth, another on the third floor of building A.

IS AMERICA DEMOCRATIC?
The claim is often made that the United States has departed from the fine old democratic ideals on which our republic was founded, and that now it bows down to privilege and money about the way all nations have from the beginning of time. But people who feel that way should consider the public schools of Ohio and everywhere else, and note how these institutions proclaim daily their gospel of democracy.
Each day of the school year the schools throw wide open their doors. The poorest, humblest, and most struggling family has an equal right there. It makes no difference whether the family pays much of anything in taxes or not its right in that school function is equal with all the rest. It can send that child long enough to get a good equipment for life, and to obtain a fair chance for advancement.
Imagine what the ancestors of our early pioneers would have thought in the old world, if they could have looked ahead to such opportunities. Then education was a privilege restricted to only a few. The idea that school doors would some day open to all, would have seemed an impossible vision in those times, and a means by which all the wrongs from which they suffered might be redressed.
The children do not come out equally well in the schools. Some of those from struggling families get so little help at home, that they are handicapped from the day they enter. But that is not the fault of the government and the schools. They can not do the whole thing. The child's family has to make a large contribution to make that education successful.
But anyway the open schoolhouse door is the open door of opportunity. Any boy or girl who is determined to learn, will learn, and nothing can stop one if they carry on that spirit into after life.

SINGING IN CHURCHES
Prof. H. Augustine Smith, widely known as an authority on church music, complains that the congregations in churches have largely abandoned the habit of singing the hymns. They apparently feel that having put up their good money to employ paid singers, they can pass the buck up to the new church choirs.
The hymns of the Christian church are one of its noblest possessions, and when well sung by choirs and congregation, an influence is exerted which stamps itself indelibly on people's minds and hearts.
The American people are spending a good deal of money in their schools to teach children to sing, and they will let something very sweet drop out of their lives, if they do not keep up the habit. They should not be fearful of opening their mouths when the minister gives out the hymn.

Women "Made Good"
In the spring of 1932 M. F. E. Spator, treasurer of the United States, prevailed upon Secretary Chase to permit him to appoint a woman to cut and trim United States currency. This work was then being done with shears in the hands of men. He appointed Miss Jennie Douglas, and, as he after war expressed it, "her first day's work settled the matter in her and in woman's favor."
In 1932 the following women employees were appointed: Miss Fannie L. Halstead, Miss Annie York, Miss Belle S. Tracy, Miss Elizabeth Stoner, Miss Mary Burke. They were the first women for whom Congress regularly made an appropriation.

Sight Influences Handwriting
If the average handwriting of a person with normal vision is taken as a standard, that of the individual suffering from nearsightedness will be found to be much smaller and that of the farsighted individual much larger.
The nearsighted person does not realize that his writing is small for he sees it enlarged and the farsighted person does not know that he writes large for his eyes reduce the image for him.

Engineer Runs 167,000 Miles on 50-Mile "Uncle Bud"
Clarendon, Ark.—J. M. "Uncle Bud" Smith of Clarendon has issued a challenge to every railroad man in America to equal his 47 years of service with one 50-mile railroad.
While in a mood for statistics "Uncle Bud" recently figured he had run his engine more than 167,000 miles over the 50 mile line from Helena to Clarendon.
He began his employment with the road as a foreman at the age of twenty-one and three years later was made an engineer. He has worked a total of 17,250 days for the road. He estimates he has used enough steam in blowing the whistle to carry the train once around the world.
The road was known as the Arkansas Central when he began working for it. Later it was changed to the Arkansas Midland, and is now a part of the Missouri Pacific system.

Mount Mitchell is the Great Smoky mountains will now hold the record.
The survey found that Mount Guyot towers 7,394 feet above sea level, or 25 feet higher than Mount Mitchell. Mount Mitchell is included in the boundary of the Great Smoky mountains national park, on the Tennessee North Carolina boundary, 50 miles from Knoxville and 25 miles from Newry, Tenn.

The Skyscraper Murder
by SAMUEL SPEWACK

CHAPTER XXVII.
THERE was a knock at the door. Marx looked up. The doctor entered, smiled as he saw the Major, and waved cheerily to the Marx.
"Am I interrupting?"
"Come in, come in," invited Marx. "You know the Major, and I told you his story. We were just going over it again. The Major has been kind enough to help us all he can, but I'll be damned if I can make head or tail out of it yet."
"Well, I'll wait until you're done with the Major," said the doctor. "Then I think I have news for you."
"As a matter of fact," said the Major, "I don't think there's anything more I can do, except guess."
"There's one thing you can do," suggested the doctor.
"What?"
"Yes, hand over the diamond."
"I haven't got it."
"I'm sorry to contradict you, Major, but you have. Shall I tell you where it is?"
"Where?"
"It's in a little pouch slung into a money belt around your waist."
"Ah!" the Major scoffed. "What nonsense are you trying to pull now?"
"Will you permit us to search you?"
The Major bristled angrily.
"Now, son here. I've come forward and done my bit in this case. I've done my level best to be useful to the police, as the Inspector can testify."
Marx nodded.
"But I won't stand for any practical jokes," said the doctor.
"Nevertheless," said the doctor, "will you hand over the stone or shall the police search you?"
The Major swore.
"I won't stand for it."
"Will you permit me to search you?"
The Major had risen.
"Please sit down again, Major," advised the doctor, "because I want you to listen to what I have to say. And then when I'm done, I think you'll hand over the stone."
The Major sat down reluctantly, his face red in patches, and his mouth twisted into a sneer.
"I shall begin from the beginning," said the doctor, "which is the proper thing to do under such circumstances. Major, we will go back to the time that Sewell returned from Russia. Your story is true in every particular. You lied only by omission."
"When Sewell took you in as a partner in this tragic transaction, and after the Russian agent appeared, you began having ideas of your own. That is, you were a little peeved at the intrusion of the Russian and you thought that your 10 per cent commission would be very small potatoes compared to what could be gotten from that stone."
"I am only giving your state of mind, and it's a guess on my part. The rest of my story is fact."
"You saw an excellent chance of acquiring the stone yourself. You took occasion to watch both Sewell and the agent while they were opening the safe. You managed to get the combination. You took the stone."
"Fine," sneered the Major. "That proves it."
"You then went to the lady with short skirts and ordered her the stone," said the doctor. "You were on the verge of clearing up a million dollars, and it was easy. The customer was bound to secrecy. No one would ever know from her that you sold her the stone. And you felt no compunction about it—I'll give you your due—for the stone was stolen in any case, and it was any man's property."
"But then came an unexpected hitch. Sewell was murdered. And after the murder, the elderly lady who came from California grew frightened. She didn't want the stone. You know why?"
"Why?" demanded the Major.
"Because she was told the stone would bring her bad luck." The doctor laughed.
"Who told her?"
"Now, I might as well tell the rest of the story. You needn't look so perturbed, Major. We're not going to do anything to you. As I said before, you have told the truth. You left only one incidental factor—your theft of the stone, and we can't hold you for that. Don't bother denying or affirming. I'll come to that in a moment."
"I want to tell you the rest of the story. I learned it after being most brutally beaten over the head with the butt end of a revolver, transported to the country, and given the most delicious poached eggs I've ever tasted in my life. I'm very fond of poached eggs. Now, Inspector, don't look so blank. I'm not delirious. Here's the story—"
"Let me first explain that any murder mystery, in the process of being unraveled, is comparable only to hitching the cart before the horse. Everything is topsyturvy; bound to be. Irrelevant facts, at least seemingly irrelevant, facts are thrown at one, and the pieces of the puzzle do not fit. For you are reversing the process. A murder is only simple when you follow the murderer from the time he commits the crime until, and if, he is captured."
"Now in this case, various facts we learned have contradicted themselves. Even when you make allowance for the usual quota of lies, you are not entirely free of contradiction. There is always the element of human fallibility. There is always the element of self-protection. As in the Major's case here, he neglected to tell of the diamond, for very good and sufficient reasons."
"I'll come to the story. It struck me as I puzzled over the case in its present confused state that the young lady in red, the butler's fiancee, was still a vague shadowy outline in the scheme of things. So I want to call on her. As I said I was rudely received, and woke up in the country. Then we got talking."
"Now this young lady is not quite the fool her fiance imagined. She's a very remarkable young lady, in fact. It always struck me as possible that she should accept the loss of the diamond as calmly as the butler imagined. Fact is, she didn't. The doctor smiled. "She's not a young lady who permits herself to be cheated with equanimity."
"I must tell you more about the young lady. It's a strange story. The butler pictures her as a heartless, abandoned creature. He was wrong. She did not love him, it is true. He was what the inspector might call a sap. They were engaged by their parents because estates adjoined. Of course, after the revolution the engagement was off, but the butler looked so pathetic, and forlorn the young lady offered him her sympathy and tried to be nice to him."
"Now, there are women who are naturally fitted for the role of spies. Our young lady was one. After the revolution she decided it would be fun to act as spy for the reds. She would have been a spy for the whites, the blacks, the yellows, or any one else. She is not unlike myself—she seeks adventure."
"In her duty as a spy she was assigned to watch Sewell. It didn't matter very much that she was attracted to Sewell. I dare say in the late war there were many feminine spies who were rather fond of the enemy. This didn't interfere with their work. I was in the war and I know. It's quite an interesting subject, but I digress."
"Now along came the butler with the diamond. Our young lady was tempted. Fate seemed to play into her hands. She reported to her employers that Sewell had important business out of the country, and that she would follow him. Her idea was to get out of the country, and sell the diamond. She did not, as the butler imagined, give it to Sewell. But here is the curious part. Sewell got hold of it in some way. The girl had told him nothing of it, and yet he had found it. Sewell was a pretty keen chap."
"Of course, the girl told the butler the diamond had been stolen from Sewell. What else could she tell him? Arriving in New York, she decided to report to Petrograd that Sewell had stolen the diamond from Russia, and that she would recover it at all costs. Here in New York she got hold of a fellow agent. She sent him to Sewell with the story that he knew Sewell had the stone, and he demanded a share. Now observe how things fall out."
"While the girl and the agent were plotting to get the stone out of the safe, while the butler was simply watching Sewell, along comes the Major and takes the stone."

Baboon, Formidable, Too
When Incited to Fury
At night the South African baboon is a timorous creature, and as its light in the dusk is far inferior to that of the leopard, the latter sometimes steals up to where a troop is sleeping, makes his killing, and escapes with a shrieking victim. But the leopard does not invariably have the best of it. There are several well-authenticated instances of such a night raider being surrounded and torn to pieces. Another enemy much dreaded by baboons inhabiting the warmer localities is the rock-python. But there are instances of even the python being destroyed by the combined fury of a troop. All snakes, whether poisonous or not, are equally feared by baboons. This is somewhat strange in view of the circumstances that the latter can at once distinguish between berries that are wholesome and those that are poisonous, even though they may never have seen them before. The hiss of a snake will reduce the most enraged baboon to a state of abject terror, and a dead snake placed in the vicinity of one will drive it almost distracted.

Rivers Diverted From Beds by Fields of Ice

It is a long way from present-day floods along the Mississippi river back to the great ice age, but happenings of the latter period have a considerable bearing on the trials and tribulations of the valley dwellers.

Before the great fields of ice worked their way from the north, at least two rivers, the upper Missouri and the Yellowstone, flowed northeast and emptied into Hudson bay. With the advent of the sheets of ice, however, these two rivers were forced to run to the south, and their combined waters cut the gorge now followed by the Missouri through the Dakotas.

At the same time the Red river became a huge pond called glacial Lake Agassiz, with an outlet to the Minnesota river valley. Part of the watershed of the Red river, became a permanent source of water for a river flowing to the south and the original head of the Missouri river. This river is now known as the James river. With the melting of the great ice dam, the Red river resumed its normal flow to the north, but the others continued to the south.—Exchange.

"George," she remarked, "listen to this: 'By my halidom,' exclaimed Sir Percival, 'it is past the hour of 12.' Now, what is a halidom, George?"
"What do you suppose it is?" he responded. "Doesn't the context tell you? Sir Percival's name said it was past 12 by his halidom, didn't he? Well, I should have thought anybody could have seen that halidom was the make of his watch."

IS AMERICA DEMOCRATIC?

The claim is often made that the United States has departed from the fine old democratic ideals on which our republic was founded, and that now it bows down to privilege and money about the way all nations have from the beginning of time. But people who feel that way should consider the public schools of Ohio and everywhere else, and note how these institutions proclaim daily their gospel of democracy.

Each day of the school year the schools throw wide open their doors. The poorest, humblest, and most struggling family has an equal right there. It makes no difference whether the family pays much of anything in taxes or not, its right in that school function is equal with all the rest. It can send that child long enough to get a good equipment for life, and to obtain a fair chance for advancement.

Imagine what the ancestors of our early pioneers would have thought in the old world, if they could have looked ahead to such opportunities. Then education was a privilege restricted to only a few. The idea that school doors would some day open to all, would have seemed an impossible vision in those times, and a means by which all the wrongs from which they suffered might be redressed.

The children do not come out equally well in the schools. Some of those from struggling families get so little help at home, that they are handicapped from the day they enter. But that is not the fault of the government and the schools. They can not do the whole thing. The child's family has to make a large contribution to make that education successful. But anyway the open school-house door is the open door of opportunity. Any boy or girl who is determined to learn, will learn, and nothing can stop one if they carry on that spirit into after life.

SINGING IN CHURCHES

Prof. H. Augustine Smith, widely known as an authority on church music, complains that the congregations in churches have largely abandoned the habit of singing the hymns. They apparently feel that having put up their good money to employ paid singers, they can pass the buck up to the new church choir.

The hymns of the Christian church are one of its noblest possessions, and when well sung by choirs and congregation, an influence is exerted which stamps itself indelibly on people's minds and hearts.

The American people are spending a good deal of money in their schools to teach children to sing, and they will let something very sweet drop out of their lives, if they do not keep up the habit. They should not be fearful of opening their mouths when the minister gives out the hymn.

Women "Made Good"

In the spring of 1922 M. F. E. Spinner, treasurer of the United States, prevailed upon Secretary Chase to permit him to appoint a woman to cut and trim United States currency. This work was then being done with shears in the hands of men. He appointed Miss Jennie Douglas, and, as he afterward expressed it, "her first day's work settled the matter in her and in woman's favor." On October 9, 1922, the following woman employees were appointed: Miss Fannie L. Halstead, Miss Annie York, Miss Belle S. Tracy, Miss Elizabeth Stoner, Miss Mary Burke. They were the first women for whom Congress regularly made an appropriation.

Sight Influences Handwriting

If the average handwriting of a person with normal vision is taken as a standard, that of the individual suffering from nearsightedness will be found to be much smaller and that of the farsighted individual much larger. The nearsighted person does not realize that his writing is small, for he sees it enlarged and the farsighted person does not know that he writes large, for his eyes reduce the image for him.

GANGLAND'S BEST BRAINS BEING DEFIED IN GOTHAM

U. S. Builds Huge Vault in New York for Storage of Dangerous Drugs.

New York.—Meeting the challenge of the New York underworld, the United States is constructing the largest vault ever built anywhere for the storage of dangerous drugs.

The vault is nearing completion on the seventh floor of building A at the army base in South Brooklyn. When its massive steel doors, more formidable than those used in bank vaults, arrive from a Pennsylvania factory, the vault will be ready to protect additional millions of dollars' worth of cocaine, heroin, opium and morphine.

Every well-informed gangster in the metropolis knows about the new vault. For organized crime in New York for the past three years has been making persistent and almost incredibly daring attempts to outwit the army guardians of the base.

Gangland knows that the public does not suspect—that is, the army is storing in Brooklyn not only the largest drug supply ever collected under one roof, but the largest amount of pure liquor in any one place in the country.

The underworld always has a market for good whiskey and rare wines, for they can be diluted a great deal. And it needs dope to nerve its denizens on to holdups and assaults of the more vicious sort.

Uncle Sam, on the other hand, is hoarding the narcotics for hospital use in the next war and is taking new precautions every month to trap his criminal opponents.

The scene of the struggle is 100 acres of waterfront property between Fifty-eighth and Sixty-fifth streets. Ten-foot high wire surrounds three sides of the army base and water the fourth. Armed guards pace up and down at the entrance to protect this principal peace time supply place of the whole army, where everything, from locomotives to flannel shirts, is stored.

The United States ran short of drugs in the last war, as did other nations. Next time it intends to be prepared. Drugs do not deteriorate. When seized the government stores frequently they are shipped by court authorities to the two vaults already in use, one on the sixth, another on the third floor of building A.

Women Now Play Larger Part in Research Work

Pasadena, Calif.—Indicating the increasing part played by women in scientific research, it was learned recently that there are seven college-trained women on the Mount Wilson observatory staff.

Miss Louise Ware, a Vassar graduate, is working with Dr. Charles E. St. John in connection with studies of standards of wave lengths and in the revision of Rowland's preliminary table of solar spectrum wave lengths.

Miss Cora Burwell, Mount Holyoke graduate, has published papers with Dr. W. S. Adams, director of the observatory, on the flash spectrum of the sun. She is now assisting Dr. Paul W. Merrill in stellar research.

Assisting Prof. F. H. Seares in research work on the distribution of the stars, are Miss Mary C. Joyner, Miss Myrtle Richmond and Miss Nanna Marsh. Miss Joyner and Miss Richmond are alumnae of Smith college. Miss Marsh is a Hunter college graduate.

Miss Elizabeth Sternberg, graduate of the University of California, is working with Dr. S. B. Nicholson on sunspot activity, and Mrs. Katherine P. Kaster, another Berkeley graduate, is engaged in stellar research.

Engineer Runs 167,000 Miles on 50-Mile Road

Clarendon, Ark.—J. M. "Uncle Bud" Smith of Clarendon has issued a challenge to every railroad man in America to equal his 47 years of service with one 50-mile railroad.

While in a mood for statistics "Uncle Bud" recently figured he had run his engine more than 167,000 miles over the 50-mile line from Helena to Clarendon.

He began his employ with the road as a foreman at the age of twenty-one and three years later was made an engineer. He has worked a total of 17,250 days for the road. He estimates he has used enough steam in blowing the whistle to carry the train once around the world.

The road was known as the Arkansas Central when he began working for it. Later it was changed to the Arkansas Midland, and is now a part of the Missouri Pacific system.

Mount Guyot Found to Be East's Highest Peak

Knoxville, Tenn.—Mount Mitchell in the Black mountains near Asheville in western North Carolina, which for a century has enjoyed the reputation of being the highest point east of the Rocky mountains, is dethroned as a result of a government survey just completed. Mount Guyot in the Great Smoky mountains will now hold the coveted title.

Engineers found by aneroid barometer tests that Mount Guyot towers 7,025 feet above sea level, or 207 feet above Mount Mitchell.

Mount Guyot is included in the boundaries of the Great Smoky mountain national park on the Tennessee-North Carolina boundary, 50 miles from Knoxville and 25 miles from Newport, Tenn.

ALMOST TIME TO THINK OF BRAKES

The Skyscraper Murder

by SAMUEL SPEWACK

CHAPTER XXVII.

THERE was a knock at the door. Marx looked up. The doctor entered, smiling as he saw the Major, and waved cheerily to the Marx.

"Am I interrupting?"

"Come in, come in," invited Marx. "You know the Major, and I told you his story. We were just going over it again. The Major has been kind enough to help us all he can, but I'll be damned if I can make head or tail out of it yet."

"Well, I'll wait until you're done with the Major," said the doctor. "Then I think I have news for you."

"As a matter of fact," said the Major, "I don't think there's anything more I can do, except guess."

"There's one thing you can do," suggested the doctor.

"What?"

"Yes, hand over the diamond."

"I haven't got it."

"I'm sorry to contradict you, Major, but you have. Shall I tell you where it is?"

"Where?"

"It's in a little pouch slung into a money belt around your waist."

"Ah!" the Major scoffed. "What nonsense are you trying to pull now?"

"Will you permit us to search you?"

The Major bristled angrily. "Now, see here. I've come forward and done my bit in this case. I've done my level best to be useful to the police, as the Inspector can testify."

Marx nodded. "But I won't stand for any practical jokes," said the doctor. "Will you hand over the stone or shall the police search you?"

The Major swore. "I won't stand for it."

"Will you permit me to search you?"

"You saw an excellent chance of acquiring the stone yourself. You took occasion to watch both Sewell and the agent while they were opening the safe. You managed to get the combination. You took the stone."

"Fine," sneered the Major. "That proves it."

"You then went to the elderly lady with short skirts and offered her the stone," said the doctor.

"You were on the verge of cleaning up a million dollars. It was easy. The customer was bound to secrecy. No one would ever know from her that you sold her the stone. And you felt no competition about it—I'll give you your due—for the stone was stolen in any case, and it was any man's property."

"But then came an unexpected hitch. Sewell was murdered. And after the murder, the elderly lady who came from California grew frightened. She didn't want the stone. You know why?"

"Why?" demanded the Major.

"Because she was told the stone would bring her bad luck." The doctor laughed.

"Who told her?"

"Now, I might as well tell the rest of the story. You needn't look so perturbed, Major. We're not going to do anything to you. As I said before, you have told the truth. You left only one incidental factor—your theft of the stone, and we can't hold you for that. Don't bother denying or affirming. I'll come to that in a moment."

"I want to tell you the rest of the story. I learned it after being most brutally beaten over the head with the butt end of a revolver, transported to the country, and given the most delicious poached eggs I've ever tasted in my life. I'm very fond of poached eggs. Now, Inspector, don't look so blank. I'm not delirious. Here's the story—"

"Let me first explain that any murder mystery, in the process of being unraveled, is comparable only to hitching the cart before the horse. Everything is topsyturvy; bound to be. Irrelevant facts, at least seemingly irrelevant, facts are thrown at one, and the pieces of the puzzle do not fit. For you are reversing the process. A murder is only simple when you follow the murderer from the time he commits the crime until, and if, he is captured."

"Now in this case, various facts we learned have contradicted themselves. Even when you make allowance for the usual quota of lies, you are not entirely free of contradiction. There is always the element of human fallibility. There is always the element of self-preservation. As in the Major's case here, he neglected to tell of the diamond, for very good and sufficient reasons."

"I'll come to the story. It struck me as I puzzled over the case in its present confused state that the young lady in red, the butler's fiancée, was still a vague shadowy outline in the scheme of things. So I went to call on her. As I said,

I was rudely received, and woke up in the country. Then we got talking.

"Now this young lady is not quite the fool her fiancée imagined. She's a very remarkable young lady, in fact. It always struck me as possible that she should accept the loss of the diamond as calmly as the butler imagined. Fact is she didn't. The doctor smiled drily. "She's not a young lady who permits herself to be cheated with equanimity."

"I must tell you more about the young lady. It's a strange story. The butler pictures her as a heartless, abandoned creature. He was wrong. She did not love him, it is true. He was what the inspector might call a sap. They were engaged by their parents because estates adjoined. Of course, after the revolution the engagement was off, but the butler looked so woe-begone and forlorn the young lady offered him her sympathy and tried to be nice to him."

"Now, there are women who are naturally fitted for the role of spies. Our young lady was one. After the revolution she decided it would be fun to act as spy for the reds. She would have been a spy for the whites, the blacks, the yellows, or any one else. She is not unlike myself—she seeks adventure."

"In her duty as a spy she was assigned to watch Sewell. It didn't matter very much that she was attracted to Sewell. I dare say in the late war there were many feminine spies who were rather fond of the enemy. This didn't interfere with their work. I was in the war and I know. It's quite an interesting subject, but I digress."

"Now along came the butler with the diamond. Our young lady was tempted. Fate seemed to play into her hands. She reported to her employers that Sewell had important business out of the country, and that she would follow him. Her idea was to get out of the country, and sell the diamond. She did not, as the butler imagined, give it to Sewell. But here is the curious part. Sewell got hold of it in some way. The girl had told him nothing of it, and yet he had found it. Sewell was a pretty keen chap."

"Of course, the girl told the butler the diamond had been stolen from Sewell. What else could she tell him? Arriving in New York, she decided to report to Petrograd that Sewell had stolen the diamond from Russia, and that she would recover it at all costs. Here in New York she got hold of a fellow agent. She sent him to Sewell, with the story that he knew Sewell had the stone, and he demanded a share. Now observe how thieves fall out."

"While the girl and the agent were plotting to get the stone out of the safe, while the butler was stupidly watching Sewell, along comes the Major and takes the stone."

At night the South African baboon, is a timorous creature, and as its sight in the dusk is far inferior to that of the leopard, the latter sometimes steals up to where a troop is sleeping, makes its pounce, and escapes with a shrieking victim. But the leopard does not invariably have the best of it. There are several well-authenticated instances of such a night misadventure being surrounded and torn to pieces. Another enemy much dreaded by baboons inhabiting the warmer localities is the rock-py-thon. But there are instances of even the python being destroyed by the combined fury of a troop. All snakes, whether poisonous or not, are equally feared by baboons. This is somewhat strange in view of the circumstances that the latter can at once distinguish between berries that are wholesome and those that are poisonous, even though they may never have seen them before. The hiss of a snake will reduce the most enraged baboon to a state of abject terror, and a dead snake placed in the vicinity of one will drive it almost distracted.

Rivers Diverted From Beds by Fields of Ice

It is a long way from present-day floods along the Mississippi river back to the great ice age, but happenings of the latter period have considerable bearing on the trials and tribulations of the valley dwellers.

Before the great fields of ice worked their way from the north, at least two rivers, the upper Missouri and the Yellowstone, flowed northeast and emptied into Hudson bay. With the advent of the sheets of ice, however, these two rivers were forced to run to the south, and their combined waters cut the gorge now followed by the Missouri through the Dakotas.

At the same time the Red river became a huge pond called glacial Lake Agassiz, with an outlet to the Minnesota river valley. Part of the watershed of the Red river became a permanent source of water for a river flowing to the south and the original head of the Missouri river. This river is now known as the James river. With the melting of the great ice dam, the Red river resumed its normal flow to the north, but the others continued to the south.—Exchange.

So Simple

Mrs. Suburbs, who was absorbed in a romance of the Seventeenth century, suddenly looked up at her husband.

"George," she remarked, "listen to this: 'By my halldoin,' exclaimed Sir Percival, 'it is past the hour of 12!' Now, what is a halldoin, George?"

"What do you suppose it is?" he responded. "Doesn't the context tell you? Sir Percival's name said it was past 12 by his halldoin, didn't he? Well, I should have thought anybody could have seen that halldoin was the make of his watch."

Egg Mystery

An English woman who bought an imported egg found on breaking it open that it was full of sand and small pieces of paper printed in a foreign language. When she bought the egg the shell seemed quite intact.

GOOD FOOD NEEDED TO BUILD HEALTHY BRAIN
The Growing Child Should Have Plenty of Eggs, Milk, Fruit and Vegetables, Says Dr. Copeland Citing the Results of Intelligence Tests.
By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.
MORE and more we realize that food has a most important place in determining the state of health. In times past, food has been something merely to appease the appetite. Anything to fill the daily demands of the stomach seemed all that was necessary. The real need of food is to supply energy, to build a healthy framework, strong muscles and red blood. There cannot be a healthy brain without an unfailing supply of good food. One of the most interesting facts brought to light in recent years is that low intelligence is often the result of inadequate or poor food.
Dr. John Munroe, of Long Island University, has come to the conclusion that intelligence is not entirely an hereditary possession. Several years ago Dr. Munroe made some interesting intelligence tests on 700 public school children. The homes of these children were graded according to certain food and cookery standards. Other conditions of environment were also considered. The tests covered the lives of the children through school and college, or business life. It was found that the students who lost points in these tests from year to year, were those who came from homes where the food conditions were poor, or below the average.
In one experiment, two groups of ten children were taken from families of fairly high intelligence. Besides the regular meals, milk and eggs were fed twice a day to one group of ten. At the end of the experiment, with the exception of one child, it was found that all these children had an increase in intelligence superior to that of the group which had not been given the egg-nogs. The latter were on a normal home diet.
Poor food is a false economy. Your child cannot make good grades at school if he is improperly nourished. Your little daughter may be fretful and perverse. Her brother perhaps has a low mark in his studies and is a disappointment. Look well into it, for the fault may not be theirs. It may be partly due to some lack in the diet.
It is not necessary to have the most expensive food, but care must be taken to have the proper kind. The growing child should be given plenty of milk and eggs, fresh fruit, vegetables, meat in moderation, and, of course, simple desserts. It is well to have at least one warm luncheon dish and always a variety. Serve a soup, hot chocolate or some scalded dish. There are endless numbers of tempting dishes that may be served. The diet should be sufficient for growth and to allow for playing and studying.
All children like ice cream. In the hot summer days it is better for a child to eat ice cream and tempering ices, such as sherbets made from fruit juices, than the heavier pies and rich pastries. They should, as a matter of fact, be served the year round. Ice cream and ices are nourishing, easily digested and sure to tempt the appetite. Often they serve as an incentive for eating the plainer dishes of the meal.
These are the days of the electric ice cream freezers, which are so easy to manipulate. And how much better the home-made ice cream is than any one can buy! As I write this it is a sizzling hot day. I can think of nothing I should like better as a finishing touch to my dinner than a dish of home-made ice cream.

In Moslem War

Sir John Robert, Chancellor, British High Commissioner to Palestine, apparently has his hands full with the raiding Arabs who have started a holy war in Jerusalem and its suburbs. Strong reinforcements from Egypt have been landed in support of the English troops now patrolling the district.

His Worthy Precedent

Little Lawrence was untidy. Though his mother made every effort to encourage him he seldom folded up his clothes after he undressed for bed.

One night his mother came into the bedroom and saw his clothing scattered all over the floor.

"I wonder who it was that never folded up his clothes when he went to bed?"

Little Lawrence pulled his bed covers over his head and answered: "Adam!"

War on Illegibility

Declaring that bad handwriting costs his stores thousands of dollars a year, the general manager of a leading store in London has organized a handwriting competition in which 300 schools will take part.

At Your SERVICE

Have you ever paused to figure exactly what it costs to live? We all have, and for many of us every cent must be made to count. We used more food than any other commodity. Therefore food is most important to our welfare. Tainted food results in illness and doctor bills. Canned and preserved goods eaten to excess produce undue strains on the digestive system. The logical solution is fresh foods, consisting of unpreserved meats, greenstuff and fruits, with a reasonable amount of canned goods and preserves. To keep this fresh food in condition refrigeration must be used. Without ice the goods will dry out or become tainted before eaten. The additional expenditure for ice all the year around results in a tremendous saving in food spoilage and doctor bills forestalled. You need ice, and by that we mean good ice.

Ours is good ice. It is pure and sparkling and may be used in drinks as well as the icebox.

Listen to This, Girls

A Nogules (Ariz.) minister preached on "Angels and Suspender Buttons" last Sunday. Oh, don't laugh; the two are closely related. A woman who watches the state of suspender buttons comes about as near being an angel as any woman we know; and she's almost as rare — Buffalo Courier-Express.

A small boy had watched a telephone repairman climb a pole, connect a test set and try to obtain connection with the testboard. There was some trouble obtaining the connection. The youngster listened a few minutes and rushed into the house, exclaiming, "Mamma, come out here quick. There's a man up a telephone pole talking to heaven."

"What makes you think he is talking to heaven?" "Cause he hollered 'Hello! hello! hello! good lord, what's the matter up there; can't anyone hear?'"—Forbes Magazine.

At Your SERVICE

Have you ever paused to figure exactly what it costs to live? We all have, and for many of us every cent must be made to count. We used more food than any other commodity. Therefore food is most important to our welfare. Tainted food results in illness and doctor bills. Canned and preserved goods eaten to excess produce undue strains on the digestive system. The logical solution is fresh foods, consisting of unpreserved meats, greenstuff and fruits, with a reasonable amount of canned goods and preserves. To keep this fresh food in condition refrigeration must be used. Without ice the goods will dry out or become tainted before eaten. The additional expenditure for ice all the year around results in a tremendous saving in food spoilage and doctor bills forestalled. You need ice, and by that we mean good ice.

Ours is good ice. It is pure and sparkling and may be used in drinks as well as the icebox.
